

PaperMasters.org

Get your academic writing here!

Literary Analysis

Student's Name

Institutional Affiliations

Abstract

The paper seeks to provide a literal analysis of the story, 'Eveline.' The literal analysis involves key themes in developed in the story. It will describe each theme and how it is developed in the story. Eveline is a story written by James Joyce on a woman who is not decided on starting a new life or holding to her memories and thoughts. Therefore, the paper will provide a literal account of the story, 'Eveline.'

Introduction

'Eveline' is a story written by James Joyce on a young woman who was confused on whether to leave home or get married. The story emphasizes paralysis aspects that reflect the lack of self-conviction and confidence. The story suggests that Eveline's repetition in making decisions affects her life progression. The paper will investigate on the aspects of escape, as reflected by Eveline life. Aspects of escape are based on seeking good life and transformation. Another aim of the paper is to evaluate the theme of paralysis. Eveline provides a focuses point in terms of understanding paralysis in the story. She becomes relied on her memories and emotions. Therefore, the paper is focused on relevant analysis of the theme of escape, paralysis, holding to experiences, and right to happiness.

The story is also based on the aspects of escape. Eveline had an opportunity to escape, but she was incapable. She has substantial reasons to leave. Eveline took the burden of taking care of their family as they mother did. His father is cruel and does not appreciate Eveline's work. The Irish man is reflected as ungrateful. After the death of her mother, Eveline states that her memories are still fresh in her mind. As life goes on, Eveline becomes ready for marriage. However, she had carried a heavy burden of poverty and family needs. This illustrates the worse situation in Eveline's home. Therefore, the difficult financial situation, responsibility to siblings and her ungrateful father are among the key reason that could have caused Eveline to leave. This indicates the theme of escape in the story, as Frank wants to marry.

'Eveline' also brings about the theme of paralysis. Eveline build to the theme through her inactions throughout the story. The paralysis ends with a view on Eveline that she is like a helpless animal. Paralysis implies the inability of Eveline to stand firm to her believes and desire. She is shown as a fearful person afraid of his past experiences and events. In addition, the aspects of consciousness are developed in the story. Eveline thoughts and emotions overcome her life perception. Thus, she always focuses on providing her memories and emotions. This reveals her consciousness on any events she undertakes. The story develops an element of right to happiness. Eveline believes that she has right to happiness. In spite of the many issues shared, she holds steadfast to her desire to be happy. The issues of fears and guilty on leaving his father and he brothers makes her not go. Eveline always focused on being happy, but her experiences short-lived her happiness.

The story also provides a clear analysis of the effects of holding onto the past issues while focusing on the future. The story first reflects the challenges faced by many modern women in their marriages because of their past lives. Eveline is satisfied with leaving her past life, but is keen not to break promises made to his dead mother. This indicates how people are affected by their past lives and thus, hinders them from be successful in the future. According to the story, Eveline pick some letters she wrote to her father and brother a clear indication that she was not ready to part with her family relationships. His family was very cruel towards her, but she cannot let him go. She focuses on the memories in order to determine what to do other people. Eveline is found at a crossword on choosing between her experiences and a new future with her family. This brings about the theme of holding to past lives and memories. Eveline is unable to forget her lives and experiences that in turn affect her current life. Even she sees Frank as a savior of her own domestic issues. This is pertinent issues emphasized in the story, 'Eveline.'

In addition, the story brings about the theme of fear. People often live with fear of different things or events on their lives. According to the story, Eveline feared that she could repeat the mistakes made by her mother. This conviction creates a thought that she could leave with Frank and start a new life, but the imagination could be realized. When she remembers about her mother's death, she fears on similar situations that led to the death of her mother. This based on her resolution not to follow her mother's experiences. In addition, she wanted to escape but she lacked the conviction and confidence. When she is led alone with Frank, she insists on praying. This shows her fear of new environment causing her to remain undecided about her personal life. She always relied on her repetitive prayer and feared joining Frank on the new and unique path. In spite of relying on the prayers and rituals, Eveline had much fear that Frank would waster her life and thus, she did not follow Frank to the ship. The theme of fear is well developed in the story. This implies that people show be ready to take on new challenges by overcoming their fear.

Conclusion

In summary, the story seeks to investigate on key themes that emerge in the life of Eveline. Firstly, it will provide relevant understanding on the issues of escape. Eveline has many burdens that provide substantial reasons for her to leave.

Nevertheless, memories and thoughts of her mother make her not to leave. This develops the theme of holding to memories and investigates how they affect the future life of a person. Reflects the challenges faced by many modern women in their marriages because of their past lives. Eveline is satisfied with leaving her past life, but is keen not to break promises made to his dead mother. Eveline is not able to adapt a new life with Frank and was left as Frank went on a ship. The story also provides for the theme of paralysis used in building crucial parts in the story. In addition, the story discusses the theme of fear. As a result, the relevant themes are developed properly in the story, 'Eveline.'