All the years in high school I have been a good learner and an outstanding student. My parents left our home country to conduct business. Moving to different countries made me learn about and adapt to a new environment at a very tender age, and this has had a pronounced effect on my life. English being not my native language, it was challenging to pursue my studies that were all taught in English. Fortunately, I managed to attend some language classes that assisted me much in the course of learning and I finally managed to excel.

I have changed schools several times in search for better education. I have attended several international schools and some of the best American private schools. Different schools have helped me learn many cultures and interact with people from diverse countries and backgrounds. My priority has always been studying hard and achieving good grades. According to my professors' comments, I am intelligent and academically grounded. I display great leadership abilities and ability to think logically, and I feel comfortable working in a team.

In course of my formal education business studies caught my interest. Additionally, my parents were my early mentors, and they encouraged me to explore opportunities in the business sector. I took part in the daily trade practice of my family and this captured my heart. Moreover, in my early years, I frequently accompanied my parents to various parts of the world: Germany, China, Malaysia, Japan, Denmark, Italy, and England. The main goal of travelling was either the supply of goods or sale of products. The combination of the encouragement from home and professors and my individual initiative have led to a decision to pursue a career in business. To excel and reach my ultimate goal I needed to gain more knowledge in the field at a reputable university like Ohio University.

The quest for personal knowledge has made me take part in several marketing and company rebranding campaigns, such as the Proctor & Gamble campaign and the Rodon Group campaign for plastic production. I have also followed their performance in the business magazines keenly. Attending the events has given me energy and determination to work harder improve my grades, and hold a degree.

I have learnt that business success does not happen overnight, but there is no particular place where business cannot flourish. To achieve success business holders and entrepreneurs have to acquire enough business knowledge and skills, look for opportunities locally or globally, and come up with strategies on how to achieve their goals. I have also learnt that different businesses, business proprietors, and business environments are neither good nor bad, the only thing is that they are different.

Due to my experience I have changed and grown both physically and mentally. Now that I am through with my high school studies and having coped with the environmental change, I have high ambitions. Moreover, I have learnt acceptance and tolerance. To be of great help to the global economy and contribute to its growth, bachelors' degree in business is vital. I have a desire to continue my studies and I feel ready and willing to undertake the course. The most important thing is that I have found focus and set clear goals.
